

ABSTRACT

A new and distinct variety of peach, Prunus persica, tree having the following unique combination of desirable features:

1. The new and distinct variety of peach tree is of “dwarf” spreading growth and a regular and productive bearer of large peaches having a diameter of between 2-1/2” and 3”.
2. Producing a very firm fruit having a resilient flesh texture.
3. Blossoms are partially showy when in full bloom.
4. A substantially spherical fruit with skin of lavender-red color overlying light to whitish yellow at maturity.
5. A very late-season maturing fruit of good taste.
6. A very late-season maturing fruit of good storage and shelf life.

1 Drawing Sheet